Taiwan, Taipei (8 April 1953)

3. In March 1953 the Chinese Communists in Wuhsing (N 30-53, E 120-06) had organized five labor reform battalions from so-called "landlords", "tramps", and a number of former Nationalist government civil and military servicemen. Each battalion consisted of approximately 500 men. Two battalions were placed at Taoch'angshan (6670/1034/1472) on the Nanking-Shanghai highway and were working on road repair. Another two battalions were tilling devastated hills near Paich'iaoshan (4101/7158/1472), Hsimen (6007/7024), and the other one was doing labor service at Chingshanhsiang (5464/1472/6763). They worked more than ten hours each day and were fed two meals of rice. They were permitted to have their relatives visit them and to write home once every two months.
